Message from Rev. Majima

Reflection During Eitaikyo: A Buddha's Lesson on Timeless Gratitude

As we enter November, Eitaikyo brings us a special time for deep reflection on the Buddha's timeless teachings and an opportunity to honor those who have passed on. It is a moment to remember the Buddha's boundless compassion and wisdom, and to express our gratitude for the guidance we receive.

One day, a man approached his Buddhist master, his heart weighed down by the difficulties he faced in his life. He had experienced loss and confusion and felt trapped by his own suffering. In a soft voice, he asked, "How can I find peace when life's sorrows feel so heavy on my heart?"

The master, having spent years studying the Buddha's teachings, smiled gently and responded, "The Buddha taught that suffering is part of the human experience for all beings. However, it is not the suffering itself that holds us back—it is how we respond to it. Have you looked closely at your heart? Perhaps you are carrying this burden as if it were yours to bear alone."

The man was puzzled and asked, "But my suffering is my own. How could anyone else understand the pain I feel when their lives and experiences are so different from mine?"

With deep compassion, the master explained, "The Buddha's teachings remind us that while our challenges may differ, the way we experience suffering is shaped by our hearts. What may seem overwhelming to one person might not affect another in the same way. This shows that suffering is not only about what happens to us, but about how we perceive and handle it. The Buddha encourages us to calm our hearts by focusing on Amida, the working of immeasurable life and unhindered light. When we open our hearts to Amida's compassion and recite the Nembutsu, we can find peace."

The man listened closely, his mind slowly beginning to clear. He felt a sense of relief, as if the weight he had been carrying had become lighter. "How can I truly feel this peace in my life? What must I do to find this light?" he asked with hope in his voice.

The master replied, "There is no special task you need to complete. The Buddha's teachings are simple. Open your heart and recite the Nembutsu with sincerity. In doing so, you will come to feel Amida's compassion working in your life. Even in times of suffering, you will never be alone. Amida's light will always guide and support you."

Moved by his master's words, the man began to recite the Nembutsu daily, offering his gratitude to the Buddha. Day by day, he found peace as he realized he was part of an unbroken stream of wisdom and compassion. His burdens began to lift as he learned how Nembutsu works in his heart, and by changing his perspective, he found the strength to face his suffering with peace.

As we gather for Eitaikyo, we are reminded of the Buddha's precious teachings, passed down through the ages. It is through reflection and gratitude that we keep the flame of the Dharma alive, lighting the path for future generations.

This November, let us quiet our hearts and reflect on the Buddha's infinite wisdom. By reciting the Nembutsu, we honor the past, strengthen our connection to the present, and pave the way for peace in the future. Guided by Amida's boundless light, may we all be filled with gratitude and peace.

The Turtle and His Flying Adventure

Did you have fun on Halloween? What kind of costume did you wear? Halloween is a great time to dress up and become someone new, even just for a day. Whether you are a spooky ghost, a superhero, or something silly, it's always exciting to try being something different. But sometimes, being someone else doesn't always work out as expected. Today, I want to share a fun story about a turtle who tried to be something he's not. Let's see what happened!

Once upon a time, a slow but thoughtful turtle lived in a peaceful forest. His two best friends, a pair of birds, loved to fly high above the trees. The turtle watched them every day and wished he could fly, too.

One day, he shared his wish with the birds. "I want to fly like you and see the world from the sky!"

The birds thought for a moment. "We have an idea! Bite down on this stick, and we'll hold the ends and fly you into the air! But remember, don't open your mouth, or you'll fall!"

The turtle agreed and held onto the stick tightly. Soon, he was flying! The forest looked so small from up high, and the rivers sparkled like ribbons.

The animals below noticed the flying turtle. “Look! A turtle is flying! How amazing!” they shouted.

The turtle was so excited he wanted to shout back. He forgot the warning and opened his mouth to speak. “Yes, it’s—” But before he could finish, he let go of the stick and tumbled to the ground.

Luckily, his hard shell protected him, but he learned an important lesson: sometimes, it’s better to stay quiet and think before you speak!

What do you think of this story? It teaches us something important not just for children but also for adults: Sometimes, when we get super excited, we forget to stop and think! Just like the turtle, who was so thrilled to be flying, he forgot to keep quiet and — oops! — he fell. But here’s the fun part: it’s totally okay to enjoy being who we are and what we can do instead of trying to be like someone else. After all, turtles — and all of us — are awesome just the way we are!
